

Are Blood Donation Sites Safe to Visit?

YES! Blood donation is an essential medical service and therefore, blood drives are not considered a mass gathering. As a healthcare organization, safety is our top priority!

- Kentucky Blood Center team members are reporting to work only if they are feeling well and healthy and do not have an elevated temperature.
- Only healthy volunteers can be blood donors!
- We encourage blood donors to complete their health history questionnaire online before coming to the donor center by using QuickPass at kybloodcenter.org (on the day of donation). This reduces the donor's time on-site and allows them to use a personal device.
- Blood donation appointments are required to help us manage the number of individuals at donation sites.
- Per state guidelines, donors and team members are required to wear masks. Donors must remove their masks for specific portions of the donation process.
- Hand sanitizer is available at every blood donation site.
- We use only prepackaged snacks for donor refreshments.
- Social distancing is important and we have taken additional measures to increase space between donors during the donation process.
- Team members disinfect donor beds and other surfaces between every donation.
- All blood donation sites follow stringent cleaning and disinfection schedules for all equipment as well as commonly touched surfaces.
- Good hygiene practices are required by all KBC team members and visitors.

The need for blood does not stop.
